AccessVision on the Move

First of all, I would like to thank the hundreds of community leaders and volunteers for their many years of support. Without dedicated individuals, AccessVision could not have enjoyed the 20-plus years of success.

As many of you may have read recently, the Kellogg Company is interested in utilizing all six floors of the former Fifth/Third Bank Building. I have heard quite often over the past several weeks, "what does this mean for AccessVision?" Well let me tell you.

This is an exciting time; we get to create another 20 years of memories in a new location downtown. AccessVision has been negotiating a deal with the Hinman Company, who owns the Fifth/Third Building, to stay in the downtown at another one of their buildings. Further details will hopefully be shared during our October newsletter. But for now, just know that we will remain the strong, vibrant media outlet that you have been accustomed to.

Our Mission

The mission of AccessVision is to empower people to strengthen a sense of community, facilitate civic dialogue, and celebrate local culture by communicating through electronic media.

Join Our Mailing List!

AccessVision is again participating and hosting works by Kelly Parker Designs and Richard Swift. AccessVision will also be screening all of the entries from the Battle Creek Film Festival's most recent "960 Challenge." The winners will also air on AccessVision leading up to and after the Fall into the Arts. "I didn't expect to see that at the Fall into the Arts" was the theme and all entries needed to utilize the same prop - a children's set of watercolors.

Mark your calendar to come downtown and take in some art from 5 - 9 p.m. on Friday, October 16th. For more information about Fall into the Arts, click here.
